

PRAY THE NEWS

The "lungs of the planet" are struggling to breathe.

the Amazon Rainforest accounts for more than half of the planet's remaining rainforest and is home to more than half the world's species of plants and animals.

The drought is intensifying various environmental and humanitarian crises. This year, rivers like the Madeira (which is crucial for transportation and livelihoods in the region) have hit record lows.

As deforestation advances, the forest becomes less resilient to drought and fire, accelerating a dangerous feedback loop that threatens the ecosystem.

The Amazon is a sacred part of God's creation, and its health is essential for maintaining global climate stability. As stewards of the Earth, we are called to act and pray for the protection of this vital ecosystem.

TODAY, WE PRAY THE NEWS FOR THE AMAZON:

- We pray for an end to the severe drought gripping the Amazon, that rainfall would replenish rivers and ecosystems.
- We pray for indigenous communities affected by the drought, deforestation, and wildfires
- We pray for the protection of the Amazon rainforest, that illegal deforestation activities would be stopped, and restoration efforts would be strengthened.
- We pray for governments and organisations working to address these challenges, asking for wisdom, courage, and the political will to take meaningful action for climate justice
