

PRAY THE NEWS

Gazan aid workers are being killed despite systems meant to protect them.

Aid groups use a system called “deconfliction” to notify military authorities of planned movements. In Gaza, this goes through COGAT, Israel’s military liaison office. But the system is failing.

On April 1, seven World Central Kitchen workers were killed despite having pre-approved clearance. Aid officials say COGAT “operates like a switchboard without an operator.”

Over 1,500 medical staff have been killed in Gaza, including Dr Ahmad Qandil, a surgeon at Ahli Hospital, who died in a drone strike after finishing surgery.

Humanitarians warn that Israel’s recent adjustments are not enough. Without a credible deconfliction mechanism—and a ceasefire—relief work in Gaza remains deadly.

TODAY, WE PRAY THE NEWS FOR THE UNITED STATES.

- We pray for humanitarian and medical workers in Gaza, that they may be protected and allowed to work safely.
- We pray for the family and colleagues of Dr Ahmad Qandil, and all who mourn those lost while saving others
- We pray for a coordinated ceasefire and reliable deconfliction system, so aid can reach those in greatest need without further loss of life.
